Absolutely under no circumstances do I or my family want this beautiful, historic and pastoral village ruined by turning it into a key/large growth town. We moved here because of its beauty, small size and nature and to strip it of that and cram hideous poorly built new builds into every corner you can would ruin every ounce of charm and joy this wonderful village has. We moved to a small village on PURPOSE to enjoy a lifestyle away from cities and the trouble those bring. Enniskerry also benefits from a large amount of film work being done which this proposal would surely ruin those prospects for everyone who has been able to benefit from this industry. Find somewhere else because this is ridiculous and you can't just take everything beautiful in Ireland and turn it into an American suburb. Additionally, locals already have issues with school places, traffic and more. We don't even have a supermarket (and no, none of us want to see an Aldi slapped into the stunning historic countryside) look what you are proposing here, how can any of you in good conscious keep destroying everything that is unique and beautiful in this country?
