Enniskerry is a small village with zero amenities. The roads are narrow and two cars can not fit past each other up the hill past the Garda station. Changing the status of the village from small to allow for substantially more houses will change the character of the village and create unnecessary hardship for locals. Developers will build loads of houses and put in zero amenities for the community. The roads will be the same and traffic will be a nightmare. The 21 bends is not fit for heavy traffic and will cause considerable congestion in the morning. I strongly object to changing the status of the town. The area is not fit for purpose for more houses on less land
